

In conclusion, students need several important habits in order to be successful in the eighth grade, going into high school, and even in life. It is absolutely necessary to remember that success does not always relate to natural intelligence; people can be successful due to hard work and personal effort. The habits of being organized, working well with others, and being a strong writer will benefit individuals in the future, not just in school. If students do not learn and apply these habits, they will not be good employees and good teammates at their future jobs. To conclude, the one most important thing to remember is that anyone can be successful as long as they work for it.
